THE SECOND SUNDAY OF EASTER

A Message from the Pastor

One day, while working at St. Ignatius Parish in Sacramento, I had to walk over to the school to see the Principal. It was about 11:45AM and I was in clerics. The First Graders were sitting at the picnic tables just outside the Principal's office feasting on some type of pizza. When they saw me coming, they all began waving excitedly. Spending time with First Graders is an experience of Easter. As I approached these pizza-ingesting Munchkins, one little girl asked me, "Are you a priest?" I said, "Why, Yes I am." "Oh no you're not!" She protested. "Yes, I really am a priest." I said. "Oh no you're not!" She insisted. The little boy next to her tugged on her arm and declared, "Yes, he is a priest. He's the old one!"

This little First-Grader reminded me of Jesus' post-resurrection dilemma. How could he get his disciples to believe that he had really risen from the dead? The answer is captured in Caravaggio's depiction of our gospel story. Christ carries the wounds of his crucifixion around—even in his resurrected body. As we read in the First Letter of Peter the Apostle, "By his wounds we have been saved." As Caravaggio sees it, Christ stands to the left, chest bared, drawing Thomas' hand into his wounded side as two other disciples look on. It is an intimate scene: Christ bows his head over Thomas' hand, gazing at Thomas as he pulls himself toward his wound; Thomas leans in, brow furrowed, the other disciples standing so close behind him they threaten to topple him straight into Jesus. Yet Thomas seems about to tumble into the wound of his own accord.

PASTOR'S MESSAGE CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE:

Contemplating the wounds of Christ could prompt medieval Christians to touch the wounds of the world. In his book on traditional religion in 15th and 16th century England, Eamon Duffy notes that “the wounds of Christ are the suffering of the poor, the outcast, and the unfortunate.” He goes on to write that devotion to the wounds of Christ often translated into acts of charity. Such acts became a tending of the living, wounded, corporate body of Christ.

Caravaggio's painting, as Jan Richardson remarks, “stuns the viewer with the awareness of how deeply Christ was, and is, joined with us. The wounds of the risen Christ are not a prison: they are a passage. Thomas' hand in Christ's side is not some bizarre, morbid probe: it is union, and a reminder that in taking flesh, Christ wed himself to us.”

“By his wounds we have been saved.” We call this Sunday “Divine Mercy Sunday.” We are all God's Welfare Beneficiaries. We have all been saved by the living, dying, and rising of Jesus. The crucified Christ challenges us now to discern how our wounds will serve as doorways that lead us through our own pain and into a deeper relationship with the wounded world and with the Christ who is about the business of the resurrection. This is a powerful Easter reminder: wounds do not have the final word.

As Thomas reaches toward Christ, as he places his hand within the wound that Christ still bears, he is not merely grasping for concrete proof of the resurrection. He is entering into the very mystery of Christ, crossing into a new world that even now he can hardly see yet dares to move toward with the courage he has previously displayed.

American psychiatrist, Irving D. Yalom, once said: “Only the wounded healer can truly heal.” Spiritual writer and psychologist Henri Nouwen, in his classic book entitled Wounded Healer, wrote that “The tragedy of Christ's life is that many who are in great need, many who seek an attentive ear, a tender smile, or even a stuttering confession of inability to do more, often find those who could minister to them distant people who do not want to burn their fingers. They are unable or unwilling to express their feelings of affection, anger, hostility, or sympathy.” When we experience the healing presence of another person, we can discover our own gifts of healing. Then our wounds allow us to enter into deep solidarity with our wounded brothers and sisters.

Divine Mercy Sunday and the entire Easter Season invite us to ask some challenging questions. How do we see the wounds of Christ in the wounds of our world? How might we be called to reach into these wounds—not to wallow in them, not to become overwhelmed by them, but to touch them and minister to them and help to turn them into passages—doorways that draw us deeper into the mystery of Christ—his living, dying, and rising? “By his wounds we have been saved.”

Fr. Mike

As we head further into the Easter season, we are grateful to celebrate school Masses and continue to meet in family groups outdoors. This last week our first grade class of ten students led our school in a beautiful Easter Mass. What a joy to share in celebrating the Risen Lord together!

We are accepting applications for preschool through 6th grade for the 2022-2023 school year. We would like to grow the current first grade class of ten students into a bit larger second grade class. Tuition assistance is available for incoming families on a limited basis. Spread the word about our wonderful school educating students in the Jesuit tradition for well over a century!

Our school will have its first dine-out opportunity on Monday, May 2nd at Chipotle at 3582 SE Powell Blvd. from 4:00-8:00 PM. On May 19th, our school will have an 80's themed jog-a-thon! Thank you for supporting our school through fundraising efforts and the blue envelopes!

We are in the process of finalizing the contracts and schedule for the playground project. This summer, we will be able to put in the new surfacing which will consist of green turf and blue and tan poured in place materials. Preschool play equipment including a climbing gator will be installed outside of the preschool classroom. A new concrete walkway and curving bench with planter behind will extend from the school doors by the current playground to the tree next to the front doors. We hope to host another Giving Tuesday event next November to raise the remaining $36,000 for a new piece of playground climbing equipment in the bark chips to replace the oldest climbing bars and glider plus adding a couple of shade trees at the corners of the current playground.

May we joyfully spread the Good News throughout the Easter Season! Jesus said to him, "I am the way and the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me. John 14:6.

Principal
