FOURTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Life's Burdens

Dear Parishioners:

Happy Independence Day weekend. Here's to all those patriotic speeches, fireworks and parades. It's an opportune moment to pause with family and friends to thank God for our nation's blessings, to acknowledge our blind spots, and to re-commit ourselves to faithful citizenship in this election year. In this weekend's gospel, Jesus invites his hearers to be humble, and to learn from him how to bear the hardships of life.

The first reading from Zechariah is an oracle about the character of the coming Messiah. This passage would shape the imagination of the young Jesus as he wondered what God wanted him to do with his life. The passage said that God is going to bless Israel by returning the people from exile and establishing a new king.

The burden of this expectation for the Messiah could have been enormous. Does it overwhelm Jesus? Apparently not. Jesus does not see the task of returning his people from exile to be impossible. Is it because his closeness with his Father helped him realize that accomplishing "the mysteries of the kingdom" is up to God, not him?

There are some strong statements in today's gospel from Matthew about Jesus and how he relates to his Father. The more intimacy there is in a relationship, the less it can be explained. Jesus is disclosing the intimacy he has with his Father to his followers. Jesus hands to his disciples things that will cause consternation. Yet letting them in on his pivotal relationship with his Father is more important than their comprehension of these things.

Jesus thanks his Father for revealing certain "things" to the disciples and not to the wise (a reference to the Pharisees and teachers of the Law). These "things" are the mysteries of the kingdom. These "things" are not duties or particular directives, but rather are attitudes of trust and valuing care of people over careful performance of rituals.

What Jesus is calling things are his reversals of the interpretation of the Law. It is the yoke of the Law that becomes a burden when the Pharisees interpret it.

Jesus teaches that care of others and religious practices are to embody their relationship with God rather than to be a means to win or achieve or guarantee that relationship.

Jesus shows what it means to be his disciple: to preach without fear and without material support – to risk rejection and even persecution. These are the things that Jesus thanks his Father for handing to the little ones. Then he tells his followers (and us) that these things are not a burden. His “yoke” is easy. Imagine how the disciples felt having heard this.

The “yoke” that is the heaviness of the Law (especially as the Pharisees interpret it) is being replaced by a personal relationship with a gentle Jesus.

The “yoke” of Jesus is personal as well as cultic or institutional. He calls his disciples and us to community (church practice) because loving care of others is not solitary. He summons us to pay attention to our need for reconciliation – to abandon interpersonal conflicts to make room for peace. Jesus encourages us to be gentle with our own struggling selves as he is with us.

The “rest” that Jesus invites us to experience is the interior tranquility of a joyful conscience. Those who labor without interior peace and compassion for their suffering brothers and sisters may find that the heaviness of their burdens comes from constructing a personal kingdom of their own ambition.

Is Jesus saying that life will no longer have its difficulties? No, but life will feel light again when you experience the companionship of Jesus – who makes your burden easy and your yoke light because he accompanies you in shouldering all the challenges that come your way.

Jesus said his yoke was “easy,” and not “easier.” The yoke of Christ is not simply a better yoke that is less painful than the anguish you endure by living only for yourself. It is a totally different yoke that has its own category of ease. The yoke of Christ brings about an entirely different set of human activities, and a radically different life than seeking only your own comfort and security.

The yoke of Jesus is easy. Keep that in mind when you feel the tug back to self-concern and narrow egotism. Yes, you need to submit to the discipline of Christ’s yoke if his values are to shine in you. But living with Christ helping you face your challenges gives the peace that the world cannot give.

On this first weekend of July, thank God for the labors of our ancestors who won for us the freedom we enjoy as citizens of the United States. Acknowledge that our history has a terrible heritage of racism that is ours today to redress. Even as we take up the burden of remedying such a pervasive injustice, celebrate the unique invitation of Jesus. Take his yoke of humility upon your shoulders, so all of us find restoration and renewal for our lives together.

Fr. Craig Boly, S.J.
